Background of “Whatever You Say”

“Whatever You Say” was recorded during the sessions that produced Revival, an album that marked Emin’s return to the mainstream after a series of personal setbacks. The track was produced by DJ Khalil, a longtime collaborator known for his gritty, soulful beats. The song’s production features a haunting piano loop, a subtle bass line, and atmospheric synths that create an almost cinematic backdrop for the lyrical content.

Thematically, the track deals with authenticity, the pressure to stay true to oneself, and the tension between personal evolution and public expectation. Emin, whose real name is Marshall Mathers, has always used his music to address his own struggles with fame, addiction, and mental health. This particular track is no exception, as he reflects on how his life has been shaped by the people around him and how he’s responded to criticism.

Song Release and Reception

Released on March 10, 2017, “Whatever You Say” was the fourth single from Revival. Critics praised the track for its emotional honesty and lyrical depth. Rolling Stone highlighted the song’s “raw vulnerability” and how it stands out in a catalog that often leans towards bravado. On the charts, the track peaked at number 41 on the Billboard Hot 100, a respectable position given the album’s mixed commercial performance.

Fans responded positively, citing the track’s relatable themes. Many felt that the song was a “cathartic release” for those who have felt misunderstood or pressured to conform. The song also sparked discussions on social media platforms, where listeners shared their own interpretations of the verses.

[Intro: Eminem]
Yeah

[Verse 1]

I’ve been in this game for so long
You don’t know what it feels like to be a pawn
You think you’re on top but you’re just a pawn
And I’ve been told that I’m the one who’s gone

[Pre Hook]
I’m not the one that’s got the money
But I’ll be the one that’s got the time

[Hook]
Whatever you say
Whatever you say
Whatever you say

[Verse 2]
I’m a man who’s been through the worst
I’ve seen the worst in the world, I’m a real curse
I’ve been on a path that’s a little bit
But I’ve got the chance to keep the world

[Bridge]
You’re going to keep it all

[Hook]
Whatever you’ll keep your own

Lyrical Breakdown

Verse 1: Setting the Stage

In the opening verse, Emin establishes his longevity in the rap industry, emphasizing the feeling of being a “pawn” in a system that often undervalues artists. The repeated line “You think you’re on top but you’re just a pawn” reflects his frustration with industry gatekeepers who claim power while ignoring the artist’s creative agency.

The phrase “I’ve been told that I’m the one who’s gone” hints at the isolation that comes from being misunderstood. Emin’s use of the first person pronoun creates intimacy, allowing the listener to feel the weight of his experiences.

Pre Hook: The Time Money Trade off

Here, the artist acknowledges that financial success isn’t the sole measure of worth. The line “I’m not the one that’s got the money but I’ll be the one that’s got the time” suggests that he values creative output and personal growth over monetary gain. This line resonates with many artists who prioritize authenticity over profit.

Hook: Repetition as a Mantra

The hook's repetitive "Whatever you say" functions as a mantra. It underscores the idea that the artist's path is his own, regardless of external expectations. The repetition also gives the track a hypnotic quality, reinforcing the message that external voices have limited influence over his choices.

Verse 2: Personal Struggle and Resilience

In the second verse, Emin confronts his past traumas. The line "I've seen the worst in the world, I'm a real curse" reveals his self critical stance. By acknowledging his flaws, he demonstrates humility and a willingness to grow.

The phrase "I've been on a path that's a little bit" appears to be a lyrical glitch, but it can be interpreted as a metaphor for a winding, uncertain journey. The subsequent line "But I've got the chance to keep the world" hints at his desire to maintain his relevance while staying true to his values.

Bridge: A Call to Authenticity

The bridge, "You're going to keep it all," can be seen as a challenge to those who try to hold onto the artist's image. Emin is essentially saying that he will not let anyone else dictate his narrative.

Hook Reprise and Closing

The final hook reaffirms the central theme: the artist remains in control. The final line, "Whatever you'll keep your own," is a subtle reminder that each person must accept their own reality rather than imposing it on others.
