Understanding the Basics of Small Business Taxes

Types of Business Structures and Their Tax Implications

Choosing the right legal structure is one of the first decisions that shape your tax responsibilities. The most common structures for small businesses include:

- Sole Proprietorship – Income and expenses are reported on Schedule C of your personal tax return (Form 1040). You’re subject to self‑employment tax on net earnings.
- Limited Liability Company (LLC) – By default, a single‑member LLC is treated as a sole proprietorship, while a multi‑member LLC is taxed as a partnership. However, an LLC can elect to be taxed as a corporation (C‑Corp or S‑Corp) to potentially reduce tax burdens.
- Corporation (C‑Corp) – The entity files its own tax return (Form 1120) and pays corporate income tax. Shareholders then pay taxes on dividends.
- S Corporation (S‑Corp) – Income passes through to shareholders’ personal returns via Schedule K‑1, avoiding double taxation but requiring stricter compliance rules.

Each structure has distinct advantages and tax implications. Selecting the appropriate one depends on factors such as liability protection, ownership distribution, and long‑term financial goals.

Key Tax Terms You Should Know

Familiarizing yourself with common tax terminology can reduce confusion when reviewing forms or consulting with professionals:

- Gross Income – Total earnings before deductions.
- Net Income – Gross income minus allowable expenses.
- Self‑Employment Tax – Combines Social Security and Medicare taxes for self‑employed individuals.
- Estimated Tax – Quarterly payments made to avoid underpayment penalties.
- Depreciation – Allocating the cost of tangible assets over their useful life.
- Section 179 Deduction – Allows immediate expensing of qualifying equipment purchases up to a limit.

Understanding these terms will help you interpret financial statements and tax returns accurately.

Setting Up Your Tax Records From Day One

Choosing the Right Accounting Method

Your accounting method determines how income and expenses are recorded:

- Cash Basis – Income is recorded when received, and expenses when paid. Ideal for small businesses with simple cash flows.
- Accrual Basis – Income and expenses are recorded when earned or incurred, regardless of cash movement. Required for larger businesses or those that carry inventory.

Most small businesses start with the cash basis for its simplicity, but you can switch to accrual later if your business grows or if you need to meet certain IRS requirements.

Essential Books and Records to Keep

Maintaining accurate records protects you from audits and helps you claim every deduction you're entitled to. Keep the following files organized:

- Bank and credit card statements
- Receipts and invoices for all expenses
- Payroll records and W-2/W-3 forms
- Mileage logs and travel expense reports
- Business insurance policies
- Contracts and lease agreements
- Previous tax returns and supporting documentation

Storing documents digitally in a secure cloud service can reduce physical storage needs and improve accessibility.

Common Tax Deductions Every Small Business Should Claim

Home Office Deduction

If you use a portion of your home exclusively and regularly for business, you may qualify for the home office deduction. The IRS offers two methods:

1. Simplified Method – $5 per square foot of home office space, up to 300 square feet.
2. Regular Method – Calculate actual expenses (utilities, mortgage interest, rent, insurance, repairs) and allocate the percentage based on office space relative to the entire home.

Keep accurate measurements and a clear record of expenses to substantiate the deduction.

Vehicle and Travel Expenses

Business use of a vehicle is deductible either by using the standard mileage rate (currently 65.5 cents per mile for 2024) or by claiming actual expenses (gas, maintenance, insurance, depreciation). Maintain a detailed mileage log with dates, destinations, and purpose.

Equipment and Depreciation

Purchasing equipment—such as computers, machinery, or office furniture—can be deducted through depreciation or the Section 179 deduction. The Section 179 limit for 2024 is $1,160,200, phased out when total purchases exceed $2,890,550. Depreciation schedules vary by asset class, so consult the IRS tables or a tax professional.

Employee Salaries and Benefits

Payroll expenses are fully deductible. In addition, benefits such as health insurance premiums, retirement contributions, and bonuses reduce taxable income. Ensure you withhold and remit payroll taxes (Social Security, Medicare, federal and state unemployment) to avoid penalties.

Health Insurance and Retirement Plans

Self employed individuals can deduct health insurance premiums for themselves, their spouses, and dependents. Setting up retirement plans like a SEP IRA, SIMPLE IRA, or Solo 401(k) allows you to contribute significant amounts pre tax, reducing your current taxable income.

Other Miscellaneous Deductions

Don't overlook smaller deductions that add up:

- Business meals and entertainment (subject to 50% limitation)
- Advertising and marketing expenses
- Professional services (legal, consulting, accounting fees)
- Educational courses related to your business
- Software subscriptions and SaaS platforms

Filing Requirements and Deadlines

Federal Tax Forms for Different Business Types

Each business structure uses specific forms:

- Sole Proprietorship – Schedule C (Form 1040) and Schedule SE (Form 1040) for self employment tax.
- LLC (default partnership) – Form 1065 and Schedule K 1 for members.
- S Corp – Form 1120 S and Schedule K 1 for shareholders.
- C Corp – Form 1120.

All entities must file by the 15th day of the month following the quarter's end for estimated taxes, and the annual return is due by March 15 (S Corp), April 15 (sole proprietorship, LLC default, C Corp) or the next business day if the date falls on a weekend.

State and Local Tax Obligations

State income tax filing varies by jurisdiction. Many states also impose sales tax, use tax, and payroll tax requirements. Use the IRS State Tax Information portal to identify specific state forms and deadlines.

Estimated Tax Payments

If you expect to owe $1,000 or more in tax for the year, you must make quarterly estimated payments. The deadlines are:

- April 15 – 1st quarter
- June 15 – 2nd quarter
- September 15 – 3rd quarter
- January 15 (of the following year) – 4th quarter

Use Form 1040 ES for individuals and Form 1120 ES for corporations.

Penalties for Late Filing

Failure to file or pay on time can trigger penalties and interest. The IRS imposes a 5% penalty for late filing (up to a maximum of 25%) and a 0.5% penalty for late payment of tax due (also subject to a maximum). Early filing or payment, even if you're not yet fully compliant, can reduce these penalties.

How to Avoid Common Tax Mistakes

Misclassifying Employees as Contractors

Wrongly labeling workers as independent contractors can lead to back taxes, penalties, and interest. The IRS uses factors such as control, independence, and financial arrangement to determine worker status. Keep detailed records and consult the IRS guidelines or a tax professional if uncertain.

Not Tracking Business Expenses

Missing receipts or failing to categorize expenses can result in lost deductions. Set up a routine to file receipts monthly and maintain a spreadsheet or accounting software that automatically categorizes transactions.

Overlooking Self Employment Tax

Many sole proprietors forget to pay self employment tax, which covers Social Security and Medicare contributions. Use Form 1040 SE to calculate and pay this tax, or incorporate your business to shift the burden to payroll.

Failing to Keep Updated on Tax Law Changes

Tax codes evolve frequently. Staying informed through reputable sources such as the IRS website, professional associations, and newsletters ensures
